The success of Avatar feels like a distant memory from a time back in 2010 when 3D films still impressed and Marvel hadn't taken over the world. As the years passed, James Cameron's plans for one sequel expanded into four more films, which would be shot back to back.

We now know Cameron has already shot most of episodes two and three, with Avatar 2 rumored to explore ocean worlds of the planet Pandora. Love it or hate it you will be seeing a lot more of the world over the next few years, and James Cameron is such an obsessive innovator these films will at the very least be technologically impressive.

Following the success of The Mandalorian, Disney+ has gone all in on Star Wars TV series. A Boba Fett series is starting now and a prequel series to the film

Rogue One

, called

Andor

, is coming in 2022, but this six-episode Obi Wan-Kenobi story is perhaps the most interesting.
